

Multitalented Student
Marcus Clark

Marcus Clark is a Video Production student in his third quarter at The Art Institute of New York City. His goal is to produce short films and commercials. However, his interests are far broader than this field alone.

With his business partner, a Graphic Design student at The Art Institute of Washington, their company called GA Art of Fashion, Inc. designs and manufactures men's and women's tee shirts. Within a year, the product offerings will expand to a full clothing line including jeans, blazers, etc., much of which is sold through their website.

These two talented young men are able to carry out all aspects of the business in house, including graphic design, photography, videography, design and packaging.

Marcus and GA Art of Fashion, Inc. have been written up in many publications—the Washington Post, the Maryland Gazette, Krave magazine, Teen Vogue and Vibe.com, with more publicity in the works.

Marcus is currently associated with the Russell Simmons' Rush Philanthropic Foundation. Through this connection, he has come to view the hip hop mogul as a great mentor and role model.

Marcus has long worked for non-profits, beginning with Teens Count in Washington, DC where he still serves as Creative Director. He gives his time and effort at many events helping the underprivileged because, "the satisfaction of giving and giving back is the best gift I could get."
